Arms August escorted them to the depôt on Friday morning. As the train was about leaving Le Commandant Leichtenstein and General Boulanger asked Mr. Ferrandini if any of the heads of the city government were there, and when he had replied in the negative, they each caught him by the hand, and the General said: "Monsieur Ferrandini, we beg you to be our interpreter, and say to those gentlemen who so kindly escorted us, and especially to the Mayor, Judge Meredith, and Captain Clark, we regret very much to leave their city so soon, and not to have had the pleasure of shaking each by the hand, and to thank them for the many kindnesses received, and them for the many kindnesses received, and to say an revoir. Say to them that since landed upon American soil we have had brilliant and cordial receptions at New York, Baltimore, Washington, and at Yorktown, but at none of them have we received that generous and warm-hearted hospitality extended to us while in Richmond."
